Where the Worlds Finest Course Live

No Limits News

Issue 1 April/May

Welcome to the very first installment from GoGolfTube.com.

Dedicated surfers do not merely go to a beach; they want to know where to find the best waves. White-water rafters need to battle the most thrilling rapids, while skilled skiers and snowboarders seek their most challenging runs. Similarly, scuba divers search out the clearest, bluest water, and golfers the most satisfying courses. What do these and other sports enthusiasts have in common? The love of their chosen sport and their quest to find the best place to embrace it fully.

A fortunate few live close enough to their favourite ski resort, river, beach, or golf course, to indulge their passion for the sport; but most of us have to travel to get there. Most of us have limited resources of time and money. We do research; we query friends, we watch sports programs, we read articles. We save money; then we take the risk and schedule our trip. Sometimes we are completely satisfied; more often we feel somehow cheated because it wasn't as great as we hoped for. We wish that there had been a better database for us to view the venue better before we spent our limited time and money. Next time, we vow, we'll do better research before we take the risk and schedule our trip.

Golf enthusiasts, welcome to "next time". We've done much of the research for you.

GoGolfTube.com is your source for virtual tours of your intended course. You can view the course before you walk it. You are able to view the scenery, check out the wildlife, and compare the courses in the area.

GoGolfTube.com was founded in New Zealand in 2007, the combined vision of three friends, two New Zealanders and an American. Cameron Laing has a Bachelor of Architectural Studies and Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Auckland, and specializes in architectural graphic design. Stephen Johns, with over seven years experience as a photographer, has outstanding imaging and editing skills. Philip Secrist, has a Bachelor of Screen and Media from Waikato University, in Hamilton, New Zealand, and specializes in video production.

The golf courses currently showcased on GoGolfTube.com are in New Zealand, as this is where the concept began. This offer includes prominent placement on our website, with high-end, high-resolution photography and high definition film. As we grow, the cost of advertising with us will increase.
